

International Students – Career Advice & Resources

For international students, finding employment in the United States can be challenging for several reasons. The best way to overcome these barriers is preparation. Here are some of the challenges and advice/resources to assist:

Confidence Level: Some students may not understand or feel confident about the U.S. job and/or internship search. Schedule an appointment with your dedicated Bloustein Career Management Specialist. It is important for you to know and articulate your skills and strengths, and demonstrate with confidence why you are a competitive candidate for position. Additionally, attend Bloustein career development events and job talks to meet and network with alumni and professionals to develop relationships and confidence.

Language Barriers - English is typically a second language for most international students; they may not feel comfortable with their speaking or writing abilities. Resource: PALS (Program in American Language Studies) <http://pals.rutgers.edu/>. Go to the Rutgers Learning Center – schedule a meeting for individual counseling and papers or written documents critiqued.

Explaining VISA status/Sponsorship International students have questions regarding when to reveal their visa status to an employer. Before revealing your visa status to an employer, educate yourself on the process of hiring an international student so that you may inform a potential employer. Meet with the Center for Global Services:

<http://internationalservices.rutgers.edu/>
to determine eligibility for Optional Practical Training (OPT) and Curricular Practical Training (CPT). Attend a workshop that explains OPT/CPT.

Job Search Resources for International Students – Finding Employers

International Career Resource: Devex - <http://www.devex.com/en>

Bloustein purchased 40 “Individual Professional Memberships” for students to gain access to 2500+ jobs monthly; career advice from recruiters; network with 300,000 + international development professionals; create individual profiles. There are also International Development Career Fairs sponsored by Devex

US Department of Labor – allows you to view which employers applied for H 1-B visas over a 5-year period. Search database by state to get names, position titles and salaries.
