

DUAL DEGREE BETWEEN MASTER OF SOCIAL WORK (MSW) AND MASTER OF PUBLIC POLICY (MPP)

The dual degree program MSW/MPP offers students the opportunity to develop advanced policy practice skills with a focus on social justice and social welfare policy. It complements and enhances both the School of Social Work's MSW program and the Bloustein School's MPP program, by contributing to specialized knowledge and practice skills and supporting expanded career opportunities for students. The program strongly matches the overall mission of Rutgers University in meeting the educational and training needs of NJ citizens.

Admission to the dual MSW-MPP degree program is highly selective and requires acceptance, by each school.

For the MPP program, students will take 36 credits, and 12 will be accepted from the MSW to total the 48 credits needed for the MPP degree. In the MSW program, the student will take 45 credits with 15 accepted from the MPP to total the 60 credits required. Thus, the full dual degree program requires a total of 81 credits.
